LARGE CAR RUNS DOWN LITTLE GIRL

Mary Williams Became Confused While Crossing Emmitsburg Road.

ADMITTED TO HOSPITAL

Machine Passed Over Her Abdomen. Two Cars Collide on Harrisburg Road.

Becoming confused while crossing the Emmitsburg road, Sunday afternoon at 4:55 o'clock, Mary Williams, six-year-old daughter of Mrs. Anna Williams, residing along the Taneytown road, just beyond the borough limits, ran directly in front of a large touring car and was knocked down, the rear wheel of the automobile passing over her body.

The little girl, it is said, was aware of the approach of the machine, but became confused when she found it was impossible to reach the opposite side of the road in safety.

The big car knocked the little girl down, a rear wheel passing over her abdomen. A local taxi driver, who was following, picked up the child and rushed her to the Warner Hospital, where she was admitted at 5:05 o'clock.

An X-ray picture disclosed no bones broken, but the extent of the child's injuries has not been determined. Her condition, however, is said at the hospital, not to be serious.

The driver of the car which struck the Williams girl, it is said, followed the automobile of the local jitneyman to the hospital, but his name was not learned. However, bystanders took his license number.

Two Cars Collide

Two automobile drivers, each unaware of the approach of the other, figured in a slight accident on the Harrisburg road, where the Hunters-town road crosses it, four miles from Gettysburg, Sunday afternoon between 5 and 6 o'clock. Jacob Miller, of Harrisburg, was driving north on the Harrisburg road, when just before he reached the intersection of the two roads, the car driven by Ephraim Thomas, Carlisle street, made the turn from the Hunters-town road onto the Harrisburg road. The machines collided, but no one was injured. The left front wheel of the Miller car was knocked from the axle and the front fender was also slightly damaged. The car of Mr. Thomas was slightly damaged, but was able to come to Gettysburg under its own power, it is said.

CHILD BITTEN BY BIG COPPERHEAD

Pearl Riley, of Gardners, Bitten Three Times by Poisonous Reptile.

Pearl Riley, aged four, is in a serious condition at her home near Gardners as a result of being bitten three times on the left leg by a copperhead snake Friday afternoon. Her leg is swollen twice its natural size, but her condition this morning was reported as slightly improved. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Riley.

Accompanied by her brother and sister, Merle and Mary, the little girl was returning through a corn field from an apple tree they had just visited. The snake was hidden in high weeds and Pearl stepped on it. She was bitten between the ankle and knee three times. The screams of the children attracted men who were unloading hay nearby. Paul Riley, older brother of Pearl, reached the scene as the snake was ready to strike again. He killed the reptile with a club.

By the time the child had been taken to the house, her leg had swollen to twice its natural size. A physician was summoned immediately and efforts to counteract the poison were begun. It was not until Sunday that there was any improvement noted in her condition. Hopes are now entertained for her recovery.

NO CHANGE IN SITUATION

Hope Expressed On Outcome of Baltimore Meeting.

(By Associated Press) Chicago, July 24—With the Government and its agencies outwardly inactive as to the rail walkout situation, little change is noted in the shopmen's strike today and hope for any move towards the accomplishment of peace was centered in the meeting at Baltimore tomorrow when the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will seek a separate agreement with its men.

B. M. Jewell, head of the Shop Crafts brotherhood had no comment to make and Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the United States Railway Labor Board sat in his office and said that he had nothing to "give out." He still declined to discuss his recent visit to the White House nor would he divulge whether President Harding had revealed a plan for ending the strike.

The statement made last night that "the board planned no further movement at present" was reiterated.

FOR SEPARATE AGREEMENT

(By Associated Press) Cincinnati, July 24—W. J. McGee, president of the Baltimore and Ohio shop craft unions, left here today for Baltimore where he will meet officials of the railroad in an effort to reach a separate agreement in an effort to settle the strike of the shopmen on the Baltimore and Ohio. Mr. McGee made no statement before leaving. Other general chairmen who will attend the conference were John K. Wall, of the Eastern metal workers, and John E. Shaffer, of the blacksmiths, both of Cincinnati; C. N. Fullerton, machinists, of Washington, Indiana, carmen, of St. Louis; J. W. Korn, electrical workers, Cumberland, and E. M. Garvity, boiler makers, of Chicago.

MAY DEDICATE MONUMENTS

Sixtieth Anniversary of Battle Suggested as Time to Unveil Monuments to Native Sons.

LATE WAR CAUSED DELAY

Memorials Honor General Andrew A. Humphreys, General Alexander Hays, And General John W. Geary.

Next July—the sixtieth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg—will likely be selected as the time for dedicating the monuments of three of Pennsylvania's most distinguished sons in the Civil War, providing the State Legislature, at their next meeting, appropriates funds for the ceremony. These monuments were erected before the World War in honor of General Andrew Atkinson Humphreys, General Alexander Hays and General John White Geary. The war and a lack of funds have delayed the dedications.

While no definite plans have been announced, it is believed any significance that may have been lost by the delay, will be more than compensated by the manner in which the ceremony will be performed.

All three generals served during the Mexican War and when the Civil War came, they were among the first to give their services to the Union cause. General Hays was brevetted for gallant conduct in the Battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma, in the Mexican War. He laid down his life in the cause of the Union in the Battle of the Wilderness, May 5, 1864, and his promotion to the rank of major general bore the same date, the citation reading, "for gallant and distinguished conduct in the battles of Peninsula, Gettysburg and the Wilderness."

General Hays received his military training at West Point and General Humphreys was also a West Point man. In 1838, the latter was first lieutenant of topographical engineers in the army. Ten years later, he became a captain and was made a major soon after the outbreak of the war between the North and the South. He was promoted during the war, until he became chief of the engineers in the (Continued on Third Page)

The operators, it was stated after the conference this morning, had agreed to the general propositions as outlined by Secretary Hoover subject to the approval of their respective districts, but had raised some objection to the legal features of the scheme.

The legal phases were given the approval of the Department of Justice in an opinion sent Secretary Hoover by Attorney General Daugherty, while the conference was in session.

STOCK REPORT

Selling Resumed at Opening of Stock Market.

(By Associated Press)

New York, July 24—Selling by professional interests was resumed at the opening of today's stock market. Developments over the week-end in their relation to the coal and railroad strikers seemed to encourage an extension of the short accounts. Coalers and transportations were only moderately lower, however. Pressure was most marked against motors and their accessories. Pierce-Arrow, common and preferred, at declines of 1 1/4 to 2 1/2 points, respectively, were carried to lowest points for the movement during the morning. Call money opened at 4 per cent.

The closing was weak. Sales approximated 750,000 shares.

FRUIT GROWERS FEAR LOSS

Peaches And Apricots Ready For Shipment. Cars Lacking.

(By Associated Press) Delta, Colo., July 24—Financial ruin faces fruit growers of the western slopes district of Colorado, unless cars can be had immediately to move perishable crops, it was stated in a resolution sent to Colorado's Senators and Congressmen at Washington, following a meeting here yesterday of shippers, growers and businessmen.

The resolution demands that the government immediately take charge both as to labor and management of the railroads.

Peaches, apricots and early potatoes are ready for market and 10,000 cars are needed to move the crops.

ORDER MADE INJUNCTION

No date for a hearing on making the order permanent was fixed.

(By Associated Press)

PRESIDENT MORE HOPEFUL OF PEACE

Reason to Expect End of Strike Is Seen in Reports to The White House.

OFFICIALS ARE ANXIOUS

Conference Called by President of B. And O. Being Watched. Seniority Appears as Barrier.

Washington, July 24.—Genuine hope for a settlement of the railroad and coal strikes was entertained here yesterday as emissaries of President Harding, under White House guidance, renewed their efforts to bring the contending factions together.

Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the Railroad Labor Board, was back in Chicago today after a lengthy conference with Harding Saturday, in which new plans for settling the railroad strike were said to have been agreed upon. Secretary of Labor Davis today forwarded to the White House a long telegraphic communication on his conference Saturday night at Mooseheart (Indiana) with Ben M. Jewell, head of the railroad strikers, his road.

One Cabinet official ventured the opinion that a way out of the railroad and coal situations would be found during the next ten days or two weeks. If the disputants do not make progress toward peace soon the Government will be forced to take matters into its own hands to avoid a breakdown of industry, he said.

President Harding is understood to feel hopeful for peace in the transportation dispute shortly. The expressed desire of a number of railroad executives for settlement has heightened this hope. Harding is watching with keen interest for the conference called by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, for next Tuesday with the strikers of his road.

The Southern Railway likewise has announced it is prepared to take the strikers back on the same basis.

Seniority rights constitute the principal barrier to peace. The Eastern group of railroads, namely, the Pennsylvania, the Erie and New York Central lines, appear adamant on the question of seniority rights. They hold that they guaranteed the tens of thousands of new men hired to fill the places of the strikers certain rights, including seniority standings, that they cannot abandon.

Hooper, it is understood probably will appeal to the union leaders to agree to separate settlements with individual railroads instead of on a national basis. If the officers agree to this suggestion peace will be restored on all except the Eastern group of railroads, as the Western roads are known to take the same attitude as the Baltimore and Ohio and the Southern.

Members of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee are carrying on conferences with various railroad executives. Most of the executives were understood to have agreed to yield to the demands of the strikers. The Eastern group, however, was a unit in its opposition to giving the strikers the right enjoyed before the walkout. Senators Cummins and Watson expect further conferences, and a change of heart may occur, they said.

The Mt. Carmel United Brethren Sunday School will hold a Sunday School picnic on Thursday, August 10. All members are urged to be present this coming Sunday morning to arrange for same.

Even the people who are all wrapped up in themselves may catch cold.

PARLEY TO DECIDE MORATORIUM PLAN

Practical Resumption of Supreme Council Seen in Conference.

Paris, July 24.—A conference between David Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, and Raymond Poincare, the French Premier, to discuss the question of a moratorium for Germany has been arranged for the first part of August.

It is expected the conference will assume the proportions of a meeting of the supreme council, as it is generally understood here that Belgium is sure to be represented, and if the Italian Cabinet crisis is solved in time, that Italy also will have delegates present.

Realization that the reparations question has reached a decisive crisis is held responsible in French circles for Premier Poincare overcoming his oft-expressed aversion for supreme councils and his decision to have the matter of a German moratorium discussed before the first Supreme Council he has agreed to attend since he was called to the premiership.

The fact that M. Poincare will be accompanied to London by Minister of Finance de Lasteyrie, and Count Peretti de La Rocca, Director of Political Affairs at the Foreign Office, as well as several technical experts from both the Foreign Affairs and Finance Ministries, and the Premier's acceptance of the invitation to meet Mr. Lloyd George without awaiting the decision of the Reparations Commission on the moratorium question are regarded here as indicating that the fate of the German moratorium is more likely to be decided at London than Paris.

Poincare Wants Full Freedom. That M. Poincare reserves full freedom of action for himself at London is explained in a semi-official note issued at the Foreign Office today, saying that the Premier's letter to M. Dubois, head of the Reparations Commission, on July 19 has been erroneously interpreted in some quarters as containing the "instructions" of the French Premier on the moratorium question to the French representative on the Reparations Commission.

The note says in part: "It is true that M. Poincare addressed a letter to M. Dubois on that date, but the document only expressed partially the ideas of the President of the Cabinet, who at the time he wrote it was not even in possession of the report of the Commission on Guarantees. Under those conditions the note could not report the final opinion of the chief of the French Government, which will only be made up after the Government has taken cognizance of all written and verbal reports submitted by the committee."

NON-RESIDENTS TO PAY TAX

Harrisburg, July 24.—Questions involving many thousands of dollars State tax on bonds where non-residents are concerned are passed upon by Deputy Attorney General Hull in an opinion rendered to Auditor General Lewis. Some of the questions have been pending for years, and, as in the case of the decision in the case of tax on stock and bonds of corporations not organized for profit, the principles will govern in settlement of many tax cases.

Bonds owned by a resident and held by a non-resident agent, attorney or trustee are held subject to the tax on corporate loans in Pennsylvania, as are bonds owned by a non-resident and held by a resident agent, attorney or trustee.

MCCORMICK AND WALSKA

Singer And Millionaire Fail to Evade Public Eye.

Paris, July 24.—Paris suddenly quit its other diversions yesterday to watch the reported romance of Harold F. McCormick and Ganna Walska, prima donna.

The Chicago multi-millionaire farm implement manufacturer and the song bird dined together and then went motoring.

Ganna Walska rebuffed all attempts of newspapers to interview her. "I don't talk to gentlemen of the press," she declared in English, sharply accented with Polish. "I'm sorry I must be rude."

McCormick and the singer were the center of interest in both French and American circles, despite the strenuous efforts of McCormick to avoid publicity by stopping at an obscure hotel instead of the brilliant Chillon.

HOOVER HAS PLAN TO CONTROL FUEL

Will Discuss Problem With Coal Operators From Six Producing States.

POOL ALL FUEL SUPPLIES

Distribution Where Needed Will be Done by Emergency Machine to be Created.

Washington, July 24.—Operators from the coal producing districts of six States will be asked today by Secretary Hoover to co-operate with the Government and the railroads in a plan to insure the distribution of fuel to the carriers and public utilities and to prevent profiteering during the strike emergency.

All angles of Mr. Hoover's scheme, which contemplates the formation of a central committee to operate through local committees in the producing districts of Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Alabama, were threshed out yesterday at a series of conferences of the Federal agencies involved. Before the opening of the meeting at 10 o'clock this morning Mr. Hoover will have from Attorney General Daugherty a report on the powers accruing to the Government in the emergency through the co-operation of the Interstate Commerce Commission and its authority under the law regulating interstate commerce.

Emergency Machine

In general Mr. Hoover's program was understood to contemplate the creation of an emergency machine, with the committee composed of a representative from the Departments of Commerce, Justice, Interior and the Interstate Commerce Commission, with the Commerce Secretary as chairman, operating through the local committees established in the producing districts at the same time of the voluntary agreements fixing minimum fair prices.

Pooling of coal in the producing districts, and distribution of cars under a preferential system to be instituted under authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission is planned to permit the marshaling of fuel at the most available points for quick shipment to the destinations where most needed. Co-operation between the railroads and the Interstate Commerce Commission would make possible adequate supply of cars, and establishment of freight embargoes if necessary, to facilitate fuel movement.

Representatives of the operators and the railroads are to be drafted into service as administrative aids to the central committee to provide direct contact with those industries.

Price Stabilization

Price maintenance is to be sought through efforts to obtain a more general observance on the part of small operators of the voluntary price agreements already in force and by co-operation on the part of the railroads to prevent competitive bidding sending coal prices skyward.

While Mr. Hoover's scheme was declared to be based on the co-operation of the parties at interest in continuing the distribution of coal, the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission to act in emergency in behalf of interstate commerce was held to be the Government's "trump" card. To this end appointment of representatives of the Commission to local committees was considered as enabling the operation of the program should co-operative efforts in any district fall short.

Primarily, Mr. Hoover has indicated, insurance of coal supplies to the railroads is the object of the distribution scheme, with industries producing necessities, public utilities and similar consumers to be taken care of as their needs become imperative, while at the same time the fuel requirements of the New England States and the Great Lakes regions are to be met.

CHASES OFF DIMPLED KNEES

Ocean City, N. J., July 24.—Policeman Fordney, on the Boardwalk this afternoon stopped a score of young women attired in one-piece bathing suits and showing dimpled knees, and told them that such things are not done in the streets and Boardwalk of this resort. They took the advice in the good-natured way it was given and beat it to the strand which, Fordney said, was out of his bailiwick. The city ordinance requires bathers to wear a covering as they go to and from the beach.

Mayor Champion was on the Boardwalk shortly before noon and told a number of the storekeepers that they were not strictly obeying the rules in covering their candy stands and cigar cases and soon there were the required coverings. Most of the stores where business was permitted had their doors partly closed.

The surf was rough and there was a heavy backwash. The life guards saved a half-dozen persons.

RUSSIAN RELIEF FEEDING MANY

Head of Organization Says 10,000,000 People Were Saved From Starvation.

London, July 24.—"If I were the Czar of Russia," said a quiet American voice in a small drawing-room at the Savoy Hotel Saturday night. It was the voice of Col. William N. Haskell, once commander of the Sixty-ninth Regiment and for the last year, as head of the American Relief Administration in Russia, holding in his hands actually more human lives than any man since the second Duma. But whatever he would have done if he were Czar remained unknown, for Colonel Haskell resolutely refuses to discuss Russian politics.

The phrase overheard was spoken to personal friends with whom he was conversing, and Colonel Haskell laughingly refused to finish his sentence with the correspondent present.

He even refused to discuss, deny, or affirm the accuracy of the report, cabled to the New York Herald Saturday from another source, that the famine is over in Russia and that Leningrad has been eliminated from Russian affairs.

"I have been pretty busy with my own job and had no time for politics," Colonel Haskell said. "I am going home for a conference with Secretary Hoover and probably will return in September." He says he knows nothing of Mr. Hoover's decision to rescind the relief work then, but will present a full statement of the situation to help Mr. Hoover to come to a decision. He is sailing on the Aquitania with his wife, two sons and a daughter.

Feeding 10,000,000 Persons

How near this young man with the grizzly hair, cut army fashion, the jaws grimly square and the snapping brown eyes—no face to trifle with—came to being Czar of Russia is best realized from the figures which he gives modestly enough as a measure of the American Relief Administration's work. Today the organization which he built and made to function is feeding more souls than are contained in all the standing armies of the world, more persons than the American Army ever fed overseas, a population equivalent to that of the State of New York—10,000,000 persons.

MAY EXTEND 3-MILE LIMIT

Move Advanced By Dry Officials Investigated.

Washington, July 24.—Proposals that the territorial limits of the United States be extended to 12 miles beyond the shore line, or nine miles farther than the present traditional "three-mile limit," are being examined by the international and admiralty law experts of the State Department, with a view to determining whether the proposed extension would be in violation of any treaties to which this country is a part.

Advanced repeatedly by "dry" advocates since the off-shore rum-running fleets have seriously meandered and tremendously increased the difficulties of the enforcement of the Volstead act, the proposals have been met with statements that such extension would require a revision of the whole body of the admiralty laws and treaties of this country.

To determine whether this obstacle actually exists, the State Department has put its best legal minds to work on the matter.

STATION AGENTS AT WORK

Ten Thousand Railroad Agents Will Not Be Called Out.

(By Associated Press) Chicago, Ill., July 24.—The 10,000 unionized railroad station agents will not be called out on strike, W. J. Noone, president of the organization, announced today, after a conference with W. L. McMenimen, labor member of the United States railroad labor board.

"I will instruct my men to remain at work and order that committees confer with the railroad management over all points at issue," he said.

INSTRUMENTS OF TORTURE

Many Devices of Horror Sold at Public Sale.

London, July 24.—Mechanical refinements of cruelty and barbarity in every unthinkable form of instrument of torture were sold at Stevens' auction rooms in Covent Garden this week. All the exquisite horrors which Ainsworth depicted in his "Old St. Paul's" dwindle almost to decency before the diabolical ingenuity of the inventor's treasures, which went cheap at the sale.

First on the list was an iron "brank," shaped like a horse's bridle, but made to fit a human face. With it went iron gauntlets, secured to the wrists with a padlock and fastened on to a hot iron plate. Heated, these could be as unpleasant as any of Ainsworth's ideas.

Most of these horrible contrivances originally were in the Tower of London, but after the fire of 1841 they were acquired by an army official, in whose family they have remained since.

One buyer, with an obvious taste for this form of artistry, bought the entire collection. Among them were also a spiked iron collar, an iron flail with six short chains at the end, in lieu of lashes; a pair of leg irons with padlocks, a pair of thumbkins, a vicious little instrument described as a nostril distender and another device which specific purpose is unknown.

The entire collection brought only $150. Apparently for the sake of artistic verisimilitude, the sale wound up with a grinning, tattooed head of a New Zealander, a savage war relic, which was bought for $200.

WIFE'S PLUCK AND SACRIFICE BRINGS SUCCESS TO AUTHOR

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

BY ROY GIBBONS

Chicago, July 22.—A wife's faith in her mate, her fortitude and unending self-sacrifice in the face of all adversity to bring her husband fame—that's the story behind the story of a new book that probably will net its author a fortune in royalties.

Thomas Temple Hoyne wrote the book. But Mrs. Hoyne published it, helping to operate a tiny job press between meal times! For three years she had tried to have regular publishers, print the book. But they refused.

The book "Speculation" attacks some of the popularisms of the day in the field of economics and politics. "It's too bold a mirroring of facts," Mrs. Hoyne says publishers told her. Hoyne himself became discouraged. He was willing to abandon his literary ambition. But Mrs. Hoyne kept her courage, pawned her jewelry and other valuables and camped on the front door steps of the publishers' homes—without success. The going became harder. They moved into a one-room home, office and printing establishment. "We'll put that book on the market if we have to die in the attempt," said the wife. And she started running off the book, section by section on a small job press. Now the book is "going."

army. He was brevetted colonel in the United States Volunteers in December, 1862, for his work in the battle of Fredericksburg; brigadier general, March 13, 1865, for his services at Gettysburg, and on the same date, a major general for his conduct at Saylor Creek, Virginia.

While General Geary did not have the military training of his co-patriots, he entered the Mexican War as a captain in the Second Pennsylvania Infantry, advancing to the rank of colonel before the close of the war. He was colonel of the 28th Pennsylvania Infantry at the start of the Civil War, but within nine months he was brigadier general of the United States Volunteers.

When Pennsylvania pays her tribute to these three warriors of nearly sixty years ago, she will be doing honor to native sons, for all three were born in the state. General Humphreys was a native of Philadelphia. General Hays was born in Franklin and General Geary, in Mount Pleasant.

All three men served at Gettysburg with distinction and it is expected there will be a large gathering here when their monuments are formally dedicated. The statue of General Humphreys overlooks the historic site which was occupied by the Rogers House during the battle. General Hays' memorial is located on the right of the Union line, which held as Longstreet's men battled against it on that memorable afternoon of July 3, 1863.

Several miles away stands the memorial to General Geary. It is over the brow of Culp's Hill and faces the line held by the Confederates before they started their attack on the second day.

Each of the three monuments is constructed on the same general design with massive base of granite and pedestal of the same material.

MAY LOSE THEIR PENSIONS

Fund for Retired State Employees Is Almost Exhausted.

Harrisburg, July 24.—Retired State employees are threatened with the loss of their meal ticket because the $50,000 fund appropriated by the Legislature last year for the two fiscal years is nearly exhausted, according to notice sent Governor Sproul Saturday by Auditor General Lewis. As there is only $1504 left, 70 employees, who now draw a monthly amount aggregating $4339, may find themselves cut to $2 a month.

The State's pension system became effective in September, 1915, and provided for retirement after 20 years of service. Later an age limit of 65 was fixed for retirement and then the act was amended last year to permit the Governor to pass on the retirement question without age limit.

Eighty-two employees have been on the pension list, 12 having died. Since the last amendment to the law a year ago, 35 have been retired. The loading up of additional employees on the list made heavy inroads into the $50,000.

ALLENTOWN FAIR TO MOVE

Directors Decided To Spend Much Money On A Larger Site.

Allentown, Pa., July 24.—Under the coolness of the trees of the Allentown Fair Grounds the directors Saturday evening held what may be their last meeting there. The big question discussed was moving the fair as quickly as possible to a new location of 212 acres in Salisbury, where it will be transformed from a county fair to an exposition that will compete with the monster State fairs of the Middle West.

Dr. A. H. Balliet, president of the fair, advocated moving as quickly as possible to the new site, which cost $103,000. General Harry C. Trexler backed the suggestion with a request for information as to ways and means. Dr. Balliet stated he had an offer for the old fair grounds of $900,000 and it was decided to expend $1,000,000 for the equipment of the new grounds. R. J. Pearce, of Des Moines, received the commission to lay out the new grounds as landscape architect and exposition builder. It is planned to have the fair on the new grounds by 1924.

RUNS DOWN SNAKES BY SMELL

Each Variety Has Its Distinctive Odor Is Claim.

Dunbar, Pa., July 24.—Lutelles Linley Cole, of Keffer Station, has blossomed out into the champion snake killer of this part of Fayette county.

Bible Thought for Today

PRIDE A PITFALL—Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.—Proverbs 16: 18.

From March 1, when the first thaw came, until the present, he claims to have sent 262 snakes into reptile heaven. Included in the list were copperheads, blacksnakes, house adders, garter snakes and a half-dozen other different species. He has set his objective at 500 snakes and expects to reach that mark before cold weather comes.

Cole attributes his marked success as a reptile hunter to the fact that he has an extremely sensitive nose and, as each sort of a snake has a different smell, he knows as soon as he catches a scent just the kind of a snake to seek. He says that if he smells cucumbers he looks for copperheads; if it is cantaloupes, he looks for a black snake, while bananas cause a close watch for rattlers; while if he smells polecats, he looks for the nearest route home.

WHY?

DOES WATER RUN OFF A DUCK'S BACK?

EXAMINATION of the feathers with which the back of a duck is covered will show that these are placed so that they overlap, in the same way that shingles are placed on a roof or scales on the body of a fish. And the purpose of this overlapping is the same as in the case of the shingles or the scales—to prevent water seeping through and causing injury.

In addition to this protective growth of feathers, the duck has a form of water-insurance in the shape of an oily secretion which is formed by the glands at the base of the feathers and which permeates the feathers themselves, rendering them thoroughly waterproof and impervious to the weather. By this combination of "shingled" feathers and oil, the duck is assured that no water will get through his body covering and injure the tender skin beneath—for, even if his oil glands should cease to function, he still has the protection of several layers of close-lying feathers, or, if his feathers should thin out, he can depend upon the oily secretion to shed the water. Only birds which are by nature intended to be at home in the water possess this protective oil gland. (Copyright.)

JAPANESE BEETLE SPREADS

Going Beyond the Bounds of Two Eastern Counties of State.

Harrisburg, July 24.—Fears that the Japanese beetle, which has been causing so much annoyance in the vicinity of Philadelphia, may spread to counties up the State is expressed at the Department of Agriculture by those who have been observing the manner in which the pest has spread from New Jersey into parts of Bucks and Philadelphia counties and now it is menacing Montgomery and Delaware.

The beetle was observed in the vicinity of Philadelphia three years ago and crossed the Delaware in spite of precautions. Unless it can be headed off it may affect some sections as much as did the army worm several years ago.

IN HIS SECOND CENTURY

Los Angeles, July 24.—Cornelius Cole, former United States Senator from California, who will be 104 years old next September 17, and who maintains a law office, will act as his own attorney in an action he has brought against the city of Los Angeles for damages to his property by storm waters.

He asked Presiding Judge Frank R. Willis, of the Superior Court, to set the case for an early trial. The Judge inspected his calendar and replied:

"Well, Senator, if you are going to try the case yourself, we'll set it in your second century, October 18. You will have the distinction of being the first attorney more than 100 years old to try a case in the California Courts."

VETERAN RETIRES AT 96

Captain Cole, Oldest Federal Employee, Is Ready To Quit.

Nicholasville, Ky., July 24.—Captain S. S. Cole, 96, reputed to be the oldest person in the employ of the Federal Government, announced Saturday his intention of retiring as superintendent of the national cemetery at Camp Nelson.

Captain Cole was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, and was appointed to his present position 40 years ago by Robert Lincoln, then Secretary of War. He is a veteran of the Mexican, civil and Blackfoot Indian wars.

Origin of "Showing a Leg."

"Show a leg" is said to be an old naval phrase, which originated in the days when women were allowed to live on board warships. When the boatswain piped the call to wake the men he shouted, "Show a leg, or the purser's stocking." Sailors do not wear stockings, so when the boatswain saw a stocking leg sticking out from the hammock he knew it belonged to a woman, and she was allowed to stay in bed later.

GET CLOSER AND CLOSER

SOB SISTER

By FANNIE HURST

Copyright, 1922, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

"You got to know it, Mae, and the sooner I get it out of me the better. But, remember, if you wanna drive me out before I'm finished, if you wanna get rid of me a d—n sight quicker than any other way, throw me some soft stuff and watch. You—well—I—the sooner I get it out of me the better, Mae."

"Huh?"

"She's a—nice little thing, Mae. Her mother's a crony with my old lady. Lives in a brownstone out on Lenox avenue. Met me first—at a tennis match she was winning at—Forest Park club."

"Huh?"

"Not a high-stepper or a looker like you in your day, Mae, none of—that chorus pep you used to have. Neat, though. Great little kid for outdoors. Nice little shape, too. Not in your class, but—nice. Clean little girl, fifteen thou with her, and her old man half owner in the Weeko Woolen mills. I—I need the money, Mae. The customs is digging up dirt again. It ain't like I ain't been on the level with you, girl. You knew it had to come sooner or later. Now, didn't you, Mae? Now, there's the girl. Didn't you?"

Reassured, he crossed to where she sat silent, and placed a large, heavy hand on her shoulder.

"There's nothing needs to worry you, old girl. Thirty-five hundred in your jeans and a couple of thou and the flat from me on top. Gad! It's a cinch for you, old girl. I've seen 'em ready for the dump at your age, and you—you're on the boom yet. Gad! You're the only one I ever knew kept her looks and took on weight at the same time. You're all right, Mae, and—gad! If I don't wish sometimes the world was different! Gad! If—if I don't!"

It was as if the flood of her emotion had risen to a wave and at his words frozen on its crest. She opened her lips to speak, but could only regard him with eyes as hard as ice fields.

"Now, now, Mae, don't look that away. You're a sensible woman and, know the world's just built thataway. I always told you it didn't cost us men nothing but loose change to show ourselves a good time. You girls gotta pay up in different coin. If I hadn't come along, some other fellow would. You girls know where you get off. Come, be a sport, old girl! With thirty-five hundred in your jeans and me wanting to do the square thing—the piano, and all, lemme say to you, let me ain't got a kick coming. Just lemme say that to you—piano and all, Mae!"

Sobs trembled up, thawing the edge of ice that incased her. A thin blue mist of tears rose to her eyes like a premonitory ripple before the coming of the wind.

"You can't! You can't! You—you can't ditch me like that, I tell you. You—"

"By God! If you're going to begin to holler I'll get out of here so quick I'll make your head swim!"

"Oh, no, you don't! Aw, no, you don't! You ain't going to quit me so easy for a little while—that your old woman found for you. Max, you ain't! You wouldn't! Tell me you wouldn't, dear. Tell me! Tell me!"

"Get off your knees, there, and behave yourself. Mae! Looka your dress there, all torn. This ain't no barroom. Get up and behave yourself! Ain't you ashamed?"

She was trembling so that her knees sent little ripples down the tight white silk drop-skirt.

"You can't ditch me like this and get away with it. You and me can't—can't part peaceful. You can't throw me over after all these years for a little hunk and get away with it! By heaven, you can't!"

He drew tight fists to his sides, his lower jaw shot forward. "You start a row here and, by gad! if I don't—"

"I ain't! I ain't! But don't throw me over, Max, after all these years! Don't, Max. You need me. There ain't a woman on God's earth that will do for you what I will. I—I ain't got nobody but you, Max, to do for. I tell you, Max, you need me. Think, dear, all them months when the customs was after you. Them hot days when you couldn't show your face, and I used to put you to bed and fan and fan you eight hours straight till you forgot to be scared and fell asleep like a baby."

"Now, now, Mae, I—"

"Then nights we used to mix a few drinks when we came home from a show or something and sit right here in this room and swill 'em off, luffing and luffing till we got a little lit up. That time when we sneaked down to Sheephead and you lost your wad at the wheel and I won it back for you. All them times, Max! That—that Christmas eve you sneaked away from your old woman! Remember? I tell you, Max, you can't throw me over after what we have been through together and get away with it. You can't, not by a d—n sight! You can't!"

In spite of herself her voice would slip up, raucous sobs tore through her words, tears rained down her frankly distorted face, carrying their bitter taste of salt to her lips.

"You can't! You can't! I ain't got the strength. I ain't got a thing in life that ain't wrapped around you. I can't go back to hit or miss like—I could ten years ago. I ain't got nothing saved out of it all but you. Don't try to ditch me, Max! Don't! I—I'll walk on my knees for you. I—"

"For God's sake, Mae, I—"

"If there's a way to raise two times fifteen thou for you, Max, I—I'll raise it. I'll find a way, Max. I tell you, I will! I'm lucky at the wheel, Max. You watch and see. You just watch and see. I can work, Max, I—"

"Get up, Mae get up. There's a good girl. Get up and—"

"I'll work my fingers down, Max, only don't try to ditch me, don't try to ditch me. I'll go out to the country where your old woman can't ever sniff me. I—I'll fix it, Max, so you—so you just can't lose. Don't ditch me, dear; take your Maizie back. Take me in your arms and call me Maizie. Take me!"

"Girl, ain't you—ain't you got no shame?"

"Just try me back for a month, Max. For a month, Max, and see if—I if I don't fix things so they come out right. Gimme a month, Max! Gimme, Max, Gimme! Gimme!"

And with her last restraint gone, she lay downright at his feet, abandoned to virulent grief, and in her naked agony a shapeless mass of frill and flounce, a horrible and not dramatic spectacle of abandonment; decencies gone down before her desire, the heart ruptured and broken through its walls. In such a moment of soul disablance and her own disablance of bosom bulging above the tight lacing of her corset line as she lay prone, her mouth sagging and wet with tears, her lips blowing outward in bubbles, a picture, in fact, to gloss over, Mae Munroe dragged herself closer, flinging her

Just a Month, Max! Don't Ditch Me! Don't! Don't! Don't!

STAYS ABOUT THE KNEES OF MAX ZIMMUS, sobbing through her raw throat.

"Just a month, Max, just—"

"Just a month, Max! Don't! Don't! Don't!"

He looked away from the sorry spectacle of her bubbling lips and great, swollen eyelids.

"Leggo! Leggo my knees!"

"Just a month, Max, just—"

"Leggo! Leggo my knees! Leggo, girl! Ain't you ashamed?"

"Just a month, Max, I—"

"Gad! Ain't you got no shame, girl! Get up! Leggo! I can't stand this, I tell you. Be a sport and leggo me quiet, Mae. I—I'll send you every-thing, a—a check that'll surprise you, old girl! Lemme go quiet! Nothing can't change things. Quit blubbering. It makes me sick, I tell you. Quit your blubbering, old girl, and leggo. Leggo! Leggo! Leggo, I say!"

Suddenly he stooped and with a backward turn of her wrist unloosed himself and, while the pain still staggered her, sidestepped the huddle of her body, grasped his hat from the divan and lunged to the door, tugging for a frantic moment with the lock.

On her knees beside the piano, in quite the attitude he had flung her, leaning forward on one palm and amid the lacy whirl of her train, Mae Munroe listened to his retreating steps; heard the slam of a lower door.

You who recede before the sight of raw emotions with every delicacy shamed, do not turn from the spectacle of Mae Munroe prone there on the floor, her bosom upheaved and her mouth too loose. When the heart is torn the heart bleeds, whether under cover of culture and a boiled shirt-front or without shame and wound laid bare. And Mae Munroe, who lay there, simple soul, only knew or cared that her heart lay quivering like a hurt thing, and for the sobs that bubbled too frankly to her lips had no concern.

But after a while they ceased of exhaustion and she rose to her feet, her train threatening to throw her; walked toward the cold, cloyed dinner, half-eaten and unappetizing on the table; and fell to scooping some of the cold gravy up from its dish, letting it drip-ple from the spoon back again. The powder had long since washed off her cheeks and her face was cold as dough. The tears had dried around her mouth.

Presently she pinned up the lacy train about her, opened a cupboard door and slid into a dark, full-length coat, pinned on a hat with a feather that drooped over one side as if limp with wet, dabbed at her face with a pink powder-chamois and, wheezing ever so slightly, went out, tweaking off two of the three electric lights after her—down two flights of stairs through a quiet foyer and out into the cold warmth of late October. Stars were out, myriads of them.

An hour she walked—down the cross-town street and a bit along the wide, brightly lighted driveway, its traffic long since died down to an occasional night-prowling cab, a skimming motorcar; then down a flight of curving stone steps with her slightly perceptible limp, and into the ledge of parkway where shadows took her into their velvet silences; down a second flight, across a railroad track, and to the water's edge, where a great coal station ran a jut of pier into the river. She could walk its length, feeling it sway to the heavy tug of current.

Out of the very edge the water washed up against the pier with a thick, inarticulate lisp, as if what it had to say might only be understood from the under side.

FANATIC ATTACKS CLERGYMAN

Pastor Seated On His Porch When Assailant Rushed at Him.

Perkasie, Pa., July 24.—A religious fanatic at noon Saturday made an unsuccessful attempt to take the life of Rev. Norman Y. Ritter, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, and later was captured by a posse of men headed by Claude S. Bowen. The fanatic is Ferdinand Magerly, aged 28 years of Leidyville, Montgomery county, who is married and has three children. He went to the home of the clergyman, who was seated on the porch with his wife, and addressed him in broken English.

"I came after the books and I want to see the priest who has been prohibiting my books from being published," he said. "My books tell the gospel truth and nothing else," raved Magerly. Rev. Ritter paid little attention to the stranger, and Mrs. Ritter then tried to tell him he was in the wrong place. Magerly became enraged and pulled from his pocket a long-handled trench knife with a blade eight inches long. Rev. Ritter jumped to his feet, while Mrs. Ritter moved toward the front door. Just as Magerly was leaping at the minister, Mrs. Ritter caught her husband by the coat, pulled him inside the house and slammed the door in Magerly's face.

Magerly immediately left the premises and flashed the knife as he walked down the street. He finally hid in the Perkasie High School building, where he was captured single-handedly by Claude Bowen, who had been deputized as a constable. He was locked up in the Bucks county prison at Doylestown tonight and will be examined by a lunacy commission next week. Nothing is known of him except that he at one time lived near Ferndale and is a native of Germany.

STATE HAS WORLD WAR FLAGS

Will Be Placed In Rotunda Of Capitol.

Disposition of the flags of the 28th, 79th and other Pennsylvania divisions which have been turned over to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by the War Department because a majority of the men composing them came from this State will be left by the Board of Public Grounds and Buildings to the incoming Legislature. Most of the flags are now held by the State, the Adjutant General being in charge, but efforts to have a place prepared for them have been unavailing. There are no niches available in the rotunda for placing them, as was done with the Civil and Spanish War flags. One of the suggestions is for glass cases to be placed in the rotunda near the niches for the World War standards.

TO REGULATE GIRLS' HAIR

Suggestion in British Commons Raises Storm.

Ruling that the age of consent for girls shall be 16, the standing committee in the House of Commons, in adding clauses to the law amendment bill, refused to consider boys of that age upon an equal footing, declaring that such recommendation was outside of the scope of the bill.

After considerable argument and wide publicity an attempt to decree that every girl of 16 or less should wear her hair either loose or plaited and hanging down behind, ultimately was defeated by a close vote. The suggestion caused consternation in the ranks of women's organizations, which indignantly declared that the committee had no right to harbor an opinion on how girls should wear their hair.

F. A. Maoquisten maintained that reforms should not be one-sided in days of equals rights, and insisted that boys ought to be protected against "female rouees," but the committee ruled that the point was irrelevant.

Twelve Years in Business Without a "Sale" is the enviable record of Haines, The Shoe Wizard. Our method is to put the right price on the right goods at the start.

We don't hear from one year to another a customer say: "That is too much or too high, I can buy it cheaper." The reason for this we under buy ourselves, and with only a small even profit added makes our prices under.

We believe and our business which each year's sales being larger than the previous year show,—we don't need catch word sales; cunning devices; make believe bargains, when we have the shoes at 50c to $2.00 a pair. Saving to our customers (whenever they come) they know it, and if you are not one of our customers go into any one of Our Stores in York, Hanover, Columbia, Gettysburg and other towns of Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia and Virginia (where all prices are alike) and you will readily see why we need never have a "sale" in all our years in business.

Our Highest Prices is $3.98. Why pay more.

DOWELL LEADS LEAGUE

Wilson Clouts Five Homers in Six Blue Ridge Games.

Going to bat only one time on July 13, Satterlee's consecutive hitting streak was broken up after he had run up a batting average of .404.

Black, Martinsburg, has rushed to the front in runs scored and leads the field with 48 markers.

Neptune, Frederick, cashed in 8 runs during the week and is tied with Gardner, his teammate, for second place with 44 each.

Conti, Waynesboro, continued to lead the base thieves with 22 while Strain is in second place with 20. Strain leads in sacrifice hits with 19.

Dunn, Hagerstown' pastime, has battered his way up among the leading hitters, ranking second with an average of .435 for 18 games. He was hit safely in the last 15 games and is playing a star game in the outfield.

Dowell leads in batting percentage, having hit safely 25 times in 55 times at bat for a grand average of .455.

Five home runs in six games is the record turned in by Wilson, the circuit's champion 4-base clouter. This string of homers pushed his total mark up to 22 for 42 games. This record has not been equalled this season in professional company. He also leads in total bases with 137.

teams, Gettysburg College had two star members. N. L. Altland, of York, was the fifth best shot in the camp and was closely followed by C. Allen Sloat, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sloat, of Orrtanna, who was but four points behind. Mr. Sloat's score total as equalled by several other college men, but as Mr. Sloat, in rapid fire, beat his equals, his final standing is best.

A rifle team is chosen at the Reserve Officers Training Camp, at Edgewood Arsenal, to represent the Third Corps Area in the National Small Arms matches, to be held at Camp Perry, Ohio. This team will compete for National honors with Regular Army, Navy, Marine Corps and National Guard teams. Each team consists of five men and a substitute and Gettysburg College is entitled to the fifth man and substitute on the team, which represents this corps area, provided the men care to go to Ohio, for the match.

In the matter of representation on this team, Gettysburg College leads all the institutions which have men in training at the Edgewood Arsenal Camp, including many of the largest Universities and Colleges in the east. The team will be composed of men representing the following institutions: first man, Pennsylvania State College; second man, University of Pennsylvania; third, Virginia Polytechnic Institute; fourth, Lehigh University; fifth and substitute, Gettysburg College.

Timber Preservative.

In some of the Western mines water that is pumped from the contains a considerable amount of copper sulphate, and experiments shown that this acts as a preservative in protecting the mine timbers against decay. Timbers which have been allowed to soak in this water for two or three weeks, sometimes outlast three sets of untreated timbers.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

610,000 MINERS ON STRIKE

Survey by Labor Department Reveals But 185,000 at Work.

Washington, D. C., July 24—Approximately 610,000 coal miners are on strike in the nation's bituminous and anthracite coal fields and 185,000 still are at work, the Department of Labor announced Saturday, upon the completion of a survey of the coal mining industry.

The survey shows that no miners are on strike in Alabama and Virginia, but that the full working strength of the miners has been idle by the strike in the bituminous fields of Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio and in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania.

The effect of the strike, as revealed by the survey, is set forth by the department in a table which by States gives the approximate number of men employed in the mines when, the general suspension of work was declared and the number now on strike. It shows neighboring states stand as follows:

Before strike On strike
Illinois 90,000 90,000
Indiana 30,000 30,000

Word of Saxon Origin.

The word "step" in "step-father" or "step-mother" is of Anglo-Saxon origin, and is derived from "steop," meaning bereft. It was first applied to children who had been bereft of a parent—thus an orphan was called, in Old English, a "step-brother." In those days a "step-father" was one who took on the duties of father to an orphan. Nowadays, of course, the term "step-child" is applied to the child of a husband or wife by a former marriage.

Richard Barthelmess has made the greatest picture of his life!

He's been in some mighty fine ones before.

Remember him in "Broken Blossoms"—"The Idol Dancer"—"Way Down East." Good stuff, eh?

But now he's a First National star—this is HIS picture.

RECOVERING GOLD

British Admiralty Salvaging Laurentic's Cargo.

The auxiliary cruiser Laurentic, sunk off the coast of Londonderry, already has given up a million of its $9,000,000 in gold bullion, which it was taking to America when it was torpedoed during the war. The Ad-mirality's salvage steamer Racer has gone to Londonderry again to drag out the remaining millions.

A great quantity of the gold was retrieved in 1917, just after the vessel was sunk, but the salvage crew were attacked by a U-boat while they were at work. So hurried was their flight that on one occasion a diver was dragged along the bottom of the sea, there being no time to haul him up to the surface.

MAN NEVER HAD TEETH DIES

Luray, Va., July 24.—John H. Calhoun, a man who never had a tooth, was buried at his home near Bixlers Ferry, this county, Sunday. He was found dead at a spring about 100 yards from his home. Death was due to heart disease.

His mastication of food was accomplished by means of a solid mass of bone that extended the distance of the teeth in an ordinary person. In this mass of bone there was not the slightest indication that a tooth had ever started to form.

He could take a tenpenny nail between this mass of bone and, holding one end of the nail in his hands, could twist it in any desired shape. He was 76 years of age and is survived by a son, Frank Calhoun.
